Watch: San Francisco is on lockdown as police seek man who triggered “active shooter” alert “He’s taken hostages; we need to take him out”. The San Francisco shooting is latest in a string of “active shooter” alerts in California. Police say an armed man was shot by an officer, who has been placed on routine administrative leave. As San Francisco, California’s Department of Public Health said the city’s emergency operations centre was receiving multiple reports of a possible shooting at the city’s Pier 39 shopping district on Friday morning. The active shooter alert was issued at around 10.25 am local time (11.25 am ET). The alert was later lifted. San Francisco police officers had reportedly encountered the suspect in the area, but the man took hostages, prompting a lockdown. According to several witnesses on the scene, the man took hostage people working at several stores in the area, where a handgun was visible. The San Francisco Bay Area Rapid Transit (BART) said its Transbay Terminal and Warm Springs/South Fremont stations were closed as a safety precaution. BART says it is currently investigating a series of alerts that went out throughout the Transbay and Warm Springs stations that are possibly connected.
